YOUNGEST MAN ON JUDICIAL BENCH OF ARIZONA

NEW APPOINTEE TO SUPREME COURT BUT THIRTY-THREE YEARS OF AGE.

IS NATIVE OF PENNSYLVANIA

HAS SUCCESSFULLY PRACTICED LAW IN TERRITORY FOR TEN YEARS

Ernest W. Lewis, who has been appointed by President Taft to be Associate Justice of the Arizona Supreme court, with headquarters in this city, is one of the youngest men yet elevated to the Arizona bench. In December last he was but 33 years old. His youth was one of the reasons urged against him by those who wanted someone else selected. Lewis was born in Indiana, Indiana county, Pennsylvania, December 27, 1879, and attended the public schools there. He attended the University of Minnesota and shortly before his graduation had to leave college in 1899 and come to Arizona to recover from the effects of a severe attack of pneumonia. For six months Lewis was connected with the Agricultural experimental station at Tucson as clerk, after which he went to Phoenix, being admitted to the bar there in the same year. For the past four or five years he has been supreme court reporter, his duty being to edit and publish the decisions of the court.

Lewis has practiced in Phoenix for the past ten years. Several years ago he joined Thomas Armstrong, Jr., in a law firm which has been one of the most successful in Phoenix.

Lewis had the endorsement of the Supreme Bench, the bar of Arizona, regardless of politics, and a large number of the active dominant republicans in Arizona.

BOHEMIA IS BAD FOR GIRLS

Manners and Morals are Likely to be Corrupted by Unwholesome Influences

When, at great sacrifice you send your girl to study art in New York, full of high hopes, you will save pain and disappointment if you consider beforehand what you are going to get back, says Anne Evans in The Delineator for May. If your girl is a genius—fortunately for American home-making she seldom is—you will probably never get anything back. She will doubtless stay there. If she is just a girl, like most girls, and you send her into Bohemia, you are going to get back something you never bargained for.

For your information I am going to make three definite charges against Bohemia which I am convinced by personal observation cannot be denied:

1. Bohemia degenerates far more talent than it develops.

2. Bohemia induces vicious habits—cigarette smoking and really strong drinking (whiskey and cocktails) among young girls.

3. Bohemia unites girls, both in taste and character, for family life and family-making.

Two or three years of Bohemia can make a more complete change in a girl's life and character than any other thing I know of, including the stage, because its influence is insidious than any other. It offers complete liberty of life and companionship, without guidance to inexperienced girls. They live in a sort of community set apart, where law, order and all conventions are despised and derided by the older habitués, who are usually thoroughly Europeanized. They adopt Bohemia's badge—frankish, untidy dress, and strange "original" affectations of manners and speech. The fruits of Bohemia's teachings are discontent and a priggish contempt of home, duty, old friends and ways, a horror of life among one's own people, and absolute refusal of the responsibilities of wifehood and motherhood, on the grounds that respectability is utterly plebeian, and most people would better not have been born, anyway. Perhaps this cheap cynicism is right, for Bohemians. If these things are good to know, Bohemia is the place to send your daughters to learn them.

SABBATH SCHOOLS WILL CONVENE TODAY

NOTED EDUCATORS IN LINE OF WORK WILL DISCUSS VITAL SUBJECTS

The annual session of the Gila-Graham Bible-school convention will begin in the First Baptist church, this city, tomorrow afternoon at half past one.

This gathering represents all Sunday schools of all the protestant denominations in Gila county and of those in Graham county extending as far east as Solomonville.

The program is a strong one, and has been arranged for the benefit of workers in this district. Every topic is a live one and is vital to Sunday school work.

Leading educators, both religious and secular, from the two counties, will speak. The session will be open to all and everybody is cordially invited to be present. Look for the program in tomorrow's Silver Belt.

PERSONALITY OF "UNCLE REMUS"

Joel Chandler Harris Was a Kindly Philosopher Who Wore a Mask of Shyness.

In personality Joel Chandler Harris had no counterpart in literary life, says Frank L. Stanton in The Delineator for May. He was incomparable, because he was different. He had not the "literary look," nor yet that of the comparatively well-to-do farmer, however, much it may seem that the blended association would be demonstrated in appearance. Of average height, he still did not seem so, for constant application at the desk had somewhat rounded his frame; and then there was another roundness that bespoke secular living and jovial temperament. Something comically blending the pathetic and the apathetic spoke from his ruddy face, but the mild blue eyes that seemed negligent or inattentive the previous moment brightened with a glint that was variously humorous, shrewd or sympathetic, as the provocation might be. The voice drawled lazily, faltering and hesitating increasingly as the man was closely touched.

A slight impediment of speech, largely imaginary, had accentuated a native modesty that impelled an unusual degree of seclusion; and yet, upon occasion, few could enter into more animated or unflinching conversation. When he was pleased or amused, immensely so, an apparent, though scarcely audible chuckle, vibrated his whole frame. He never laughed loudly, that chuckle was his superlative. And if you sat and talked with him by the hour; or, if, knowing the man, you watched him shambling his way through the crowded streets of Atlanta, your first impression was forever effaced. Through the strange mask of shyness and deceptive insignificance, you saw the keen, kindly philosopher; the thoughtful, imaginative man of letters who had written his way into the heart of civilization.

The man and his methods constituted such an anomaly in American literature that one must needs tread in unusual paths to secure a glimpse of his real personality.

The sources of his knowledge of human nature were just two—observation and absorption by shy, silent contact. The fruits of these faculties were poured into the crucible of his keen, but kindly philosophy and his alert introspection; the result is the stories that have made him famous.

Biliousness and Constipation

For years I was troubled with biliousness and constipation, which made life miserable for me. My appetite failed me. I lost my usual force and vitality. Peppin preparations and cathartics only made matters worse. I do not know where I should have been today had I not tried Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. The tablets relieve the ill feeling at once, strengthen the digestive functions, purify the stomach, liver and blood, helping the system to do its work naturally.—Mrs. Rosa Potts, Birmingham, Ala. These tablets are for sale my all druggists.

Railroad Seems Certain.

It now seems certain, says the Holbrook Argus, that a railroad will be built from Holbrook to Fort Apache before so very long. Mr. Campbell and W. H. Clark have been plotting a number of capitalists and engineers over the route during the last few days. These men all speak well of the project, and fully believe that such a road should be built and that right away.

CONGRESS REVOLTS AGAINST DAVIS' PICTURE

WASHINGTON, May 4.—The protest against the action of the legislature of Mississippi in placing the portrait of Jefferson Davis on the silver service to be presented to the battleship bearing the name of that state was presented to the house today by Hollingsworth of Ohio, in the shape of a resolution. Hollingsworth desires to have the secretary of the navy inform congress what lesson of patriotism and what ideals of government the proposed gift is intended to inspire.

He also desires to know if the officers of the Mississippi, including Captain John C. Fremont, a descendant of General Fremont of the Union army, agrees to the proposed decoration.
